New ConTex-Commentary - issued:	13.12.18
2018 has been a very interesting year during which the New ConTex Commentaries varied substantially: From the enthusiastic ones in the beginning of the year to the cautiously positive during Summer and now we are getting to the cautiously skeptical ones. The current market situation has confused owners and charterers alike. The former see their tonnage, especially the medium to smaller feeder sizes, being redelivered or staying prompt for a substantial period of time and the latter are strategizing new alliances, thinking about scrubbers, closing down services and downsizing or upsizing - depending on each specific trade. Charterers seem to be clear that they will not have any new requirements before the end of CNY and their uncertainty is also reflected in the very flexible periods that they are asking. This peculiar market is affecting the general sentiment and, of course, the movement of the New ConTex. This week we see steadily down or steady trends in most of the segments. The Panamaxs and Post-Panamaxes have had an easier time securing employment at decent rates so far but there is unfixed tonnage which exercises pressure on the index for the 4250s-albeit marginal. The 2500s and 2700s have so far weathered the storm quite well by limiting the decline to decent levels. The oversupply of the 2700s, however, may change this. On the 1100s and 1700s no further comments are necessary as these segments have particularly been hit hard with scarce requirements and very low benchmarks. We are hoping for a much clearer market situation in 2019.
